

Moe's 2009 Year Ending Blowout Bonanza Letter

Emily and I did a bunch of painting and installed hardwood floors into my condo this year completely transforming the aesthetics. Now it's fancy and you should come visit!!! [Emily made me write "fancy"]

This year my old company sold our small graphics team to Qualcomm. It was a great deal for me. While the rest of the world has been in recession, I've been getting big raises, lots of stock options, and record bonuses. I'm very thankful at how lucky I've been. This new company has me traveling more. I spent three weeks at Google in California debugging a new phone they're releasing. I have a great job!

Blowout Prices!!

Here's a picture of Tookie and Emily in a Kayak from this summer. Once again, we've been out exploring the world this year. We've seen everything from the birthplace of Jonny Appleseed in Massachusetts to Shanghai in China.

The picture above was captured by my invention, the Camera Axe. It is a tool for photographers that allow them to capture images which require superhuman reflexes, such as capturing the above water droplet or bullets shattering glass. I recently started selling these at my new online store. To see more phenomenal pictures go to my blog.

For the best news in town:

Call: 508.344.8822

Email: ribblem@yahoo.com

Blog: <http://glacialwanderer.blogspot.com>

SALE SALE SALE!!!